New train schedules for the Soviet Zone have made
Berlin only a through station. SECRET
Approved For Release 2001/03/23 : CIA-RDP83-00415R011400020004-8

"Berlin" has disappeared from railway stations. CONTROL U. S. OFFICIALS ONLY

The express and semi-express trains from Magdeburg in the future will be routed over the Metropolitan railway to Frankfurt-a-Oder and Fuerstenberg-a-Oder, and those from Stendal and Schwerin to Goerlitz and Zittau. Trains from Leipzig, Plauen and Eisenach make a loop in Berlin. They are routed by Seddin, Wannsee and the Metropolitan railway to the Silesian station, where, after a short stop, they proceed easterly over the southern outer freight belt railway back to their starting point. Some of these trains have Dresden as a new terminus. Twenty minutes are allowed for passengers to change at the Silesian station. Trains no longer stop at the Rummelsburg and Grunewald stations. The round trip time of the trains is increased by one to three days through these changes.
